Assessment of the Regulation on Balanced Housing Development

1. Background and Rationale

Republic Act No. 7279 (RA 7279) or the Urban Development and Housing Act of 1992”, which was approved on March 24, 1992, requires the developers of subdivision projects to develop an area for socialized housing.¹ The balanced housing development is expected to contribute to achieving the objectives of RA 7279. Additional guidelines have been released over time in order to improve the implementation of the policy. Despite the changes that have been made over time, the significance of the balanced housing requirement to the socialized housing development is yet to be determined.

Article V, Section 18 of RA 7279 is concerned on Balanced Housing Development. Under Section 18, the developers of subdivision projects are required to develop an area for socialized housing equivalent to at least 20% of either the total subdivision area or total subdivision project cost. The requirement may also be complied by the developers through: (1) the development of a new settlement; (2) slum upgrading/renewal of areas for priority development either through zonal improvement programs/slum improvement and resettlement programs; (3) joint-venture projects with either the local government units (LGUs) or any of the housing agencies; or (4) participation in the Community Mortgage Program (CMP).

The compliance of the developers to the balanced housing requirement is supposed to help achieve the objectives of RA 7279. The requirement should help improve of the conditions of the underprivileged and homeless citizens in urban areas and in resettlement areas by increasing their access to decent and affordable housing.

In order to facilitate the implementation of the policy and further ensure the achievement of the objectives of RA 7279, implementing rules and regulations have been issued. On June 1992, the Implementing Rules and Regulations (IRR) for the balanced housing provisions (Sec. 18) of RA 7279 were approved.² The 1992 IRR was to cover residential subdivision and condominium projects and/or proposed expansions of already existing projects. It provided the mode of compliance for main subdivision projects limited to the sale of lots only, main subdivision projects which consist of the sale of house and lot packages, and residential condominium projects.

¹ Republic Act No. 7279: Urban Development and Housing Act of 1992. An Act to Provide for a Comprehensive and Continuing Urban Development and Housing Program, Establish the Mechanism for its Implementation, and for Other Purposes

² Implementing Rules and Regulations to Govern Section 18 of Republic Act No. 7279 Otherwise Known as the Urban Development and Housing Act of 1992.

Additionally, the 1992 IRR emphasizes the options on how the 20% of the total project cost may be complied, i.e., through new settlements, slum upgrading, CMP, and joint-venture projects. It also provides that the developers in metropolitan areas may earn credits which could be used to comply with the requirement for future main subdivision projects. The 1992 IRR requires that the developers secure a develop permit and a license to sell. A performance bond is also required to guarantee the completion of the socialized housing project. From the date of issuance of the License to Sell, the developers are given one year to complete their socialized housing project or as approved by the Board. A revised IRR, Board Resolution No. 890 (BR 890) (Series of 2012), was approved on October 2012.³ BR 890 clarified that the developers may not combine project area and cost in their computation for a single compliance. BR 890 also laid out other ways in which developers could comply with the requirement and provided additional details. Developers could, for instance, engage in a joint venture project with its subsidiary and even with other developers accredited by the Housing and Land Use Regulatory Board (HLURB) in the production of new socialized housing.⁴ BR 890 states that the solidary liability to complete the development, nevertheless, should remain with the developers of the main subdivision project.⁵ Developers may also contribute to new socialized housing projects of HLURB-accredited non-governmental organizations (NGOs), as long as they keep the liability to complete the development. They could also provide educational facilities, health facilities, productivity/livelihood centers, and other basic amenities and facilities in socialized housing projects, as provided in Sec. 21 and 22 of RA 7279.⁶ The joint-venture projects of the developers with LGUs or any of the housing agencies may be made through the development of a socialized housing or resettlement project, or takeover by the HLURB of the development of socialized housing projects; purchase of socialized housing bonds approved by the HLURB; rehabilitation of non-performing socialized housing assets; and provision of educational facilities, health facilities, productivity/livelihood centers, and other basic amenities and facilities as provided in Sec. 21 and 22 in socialized housing projects. This is provided that the liability for the completion remains with the developer of the main subdivision project. The revised IRR also provides that the developers who choose to participate in the Community Mortgage Program may fulfill the balanced housing requirement by: (1) providing a parcel of land to a CMP project; (2) providing or developing a right-of-way, access to roads, or public transportation lines; or providing or upgrading amenities, facilities, or other forms

³ Board Resolution No. 890 (Series of 2012). Revised Implementing Rules and Regulations to Govern Section 18 of Republic Act No. 7279 Otherwise Known as the Urban Development and Housing Act of 1992.

of development in an existing CMP project; or (3) subscribing or purchasing asset-backed securities as originated or conveyed by the SHFC. The revised IRR has a provision (Sec. 8) stating that the License to sell of the main subdivision project may be suspended, cancelled, or revoked if the corresponding compliance project has not been completely developed after one year or after the period approved by the HLURB.

The HLURB also issued Memorandum Circulars to provide guidelines for the provisions of BR 890. Sec. 5, HLURB Memorandum Circular No. 01, Series of 2013 provides that a combination of one mode of compliance with other allowable modes is not prohibited, except when the combination is based on both project area and project cost.⁷ Sec. 5 also makes possible the development of a socialized housing project as compliance for a developer's future main subdivision project(s), as well as the development of a socialized housing project where excesses are used for the same developer's other main subdivision project(s). For developers of main subdivision projects, who are able to submit a proof of completion of their respective compliance project, a Compliance Certificate shall be provided by the HLURB. Some of the other guidelines are specifically concerned on the different modes of compliance that developers may pursue (e.g. development of new settlement, slum upgrading, joint venture with either the LGUs or any of the housing agencies, and participation in the Community Mortgage Program).⁸ Most of these guidelines contain provisions regarding the application for the Certificate of Registration and License to Sell; publication of the notice of filing of the registration statement and the posting of billboard notices; issuance of the Compliance Certificate; etc. The HLURB also released guidelines for the utilization of unconstructed housing components of socialized housing projects.⁹

There are also guidelines on the accreditation of developers of socialized housing projects and of NGOs.¹⁰ HLURB Memorandum Circular No. 06 (MC 06), Series of 2013 provides that a developer of a socialized housing project should apply for general accreditation with the HLURB before entering a Joint Venture with a developer of a main subdivision project, and the developer of the socialized housing project should be engaged in the development of socialized housing projects. HLURB Memorandum Circular No. 07A, Series of 2013 provides that the developer of the socialized housing project must have already produced at least 500 housing or condominium units in a project/projects either covered by BP 220 or PD 957; this requirement was previously set at 2,000 units under HLURB MC 06, Series of 2013.¹¹ HLURB Memorandum Circular No. 07, Series of 2013 provides that an NGO should also apply for accreditation with the HLURB before entering an agreement with the developer of a main subdivision project. The NGO must have the following qualifications: (1) be a domestic, non-stock corporation organized under the Philippine laws; (2) engaged in the development of socialized housing projects, in the production of socialized units, or in the construction of basic amenities and facilities; and (3) already produced at least 500 socialized housing units. Additionally, the HLURB issued guidelines on the provisional accreditation of developers of socialized housing projects.¹² HLURB Memorandum Circular No. 10 (MC 10), Series of 2015 provides that developers of socialized housing projects that have not yet constructed/developed at least 500 housing units may apply for provisional accreditation provided that it has already secured the development permit of the socialized housing project. HLURB MC 10 further provides that applicants for provisional accreditation must be engaged in the development of socialized housing projects. Lastly, the HLURB also provided guidelines that give incentives and uniform procedures for developers of main subdivision projects complying with Sec. 18 of RA 7279 to benefit areas affected by calamities.¹³

Republic Act No. 10884, known as the “Balanced Housing Development Program Amendments”, amended RA 7279 in order to strengthen the Balanced Housing Development Program.¹⁴ The Act provides a distinction between the balanced housing requirements for subdivision and condominium projects. Sec. 18 provides that owners and/or developers of a proposed subdivision projects should develop an area for socialized housing equivalent to at least 15% of the total subdivision area/ project cost. Owners and/or developers of proposed condominium projects, meanwhile, should develop an area for socialized housing equivalent to at least 5% of condominium area/project cost.

From 2006 to 2016, there have been 698 projects which have been issued with a license to sell specifically for the compliance of the balanced housing requirement (see Figure 1). It is noticeable that the number of compliance projects issued with a license to sell from 2013 to 2016, the period in which the HLURB released additional guidelines on the balanced housing requirement, is on an upward trend.

Basic Data Source: Based on monitoring reports of Housing and Land Use Regulatory Board (various years). Data retrieved on March 9, 2017 from <http://hlurb.gov.ph/license-to-sell-statistics>.

The increase in the number of compliance projects is apparent; nevertheless, the significance of the balanced housing requirement to socialized housing development and to total housing production in general is yet to be determined.
